- The composition of the main page looks good with the navigation bar on the left side and horizontal scrolls for the books and the screenplays. They are working great.
- The location of the Author's name is a bit off the composition. It would be better if it is located on the right side along with the books and screenplays.
- Also, if the title of the website is Roald Dahl, I'd like to have a creative title, since the goal for the website is to not only inform people about Roald Dahl but also how great his books are.
- I think the homepage label is unnecessary since the homepage is the default page.
- I would suggest adding two more <sections> for "About life" and "Legacy" on the main page and add buttons moving to those subpages. They do not need to have long texts. They are for the viewers to understand and lead them to click on the buttons. One suggestion for the first <section> is that you can consider is having the first section with Roald Dahl's image on the background with the title, his name, and the button to the first subpage on top of it.
- minor details about the design, it would work better without the border boxes around the books.
- Try different font styles and a bit smaller font sizes for the menu.
